

HUMOR

Real News

By Anil Shrivastava 'Musafir'

Folks, if you are confused with news coverage on cable channels, you haven't read National Enquirer. You probably think that check-out-counter publications are for the dim-witted. Well, you are missing a lot. Since I have taken to reading check-out counter publications, I am very well informed now.

According to one of the most reliable check-out-counter publications, our president is possessed by some spirit from outer space. It is the spirit that does the talking for him. He listens to the voice of the spirit first and then speaks. That's why sometimes he seems disoriented, self-contradicting, and dazed.

When one of the reporters asked him, "Do you think inflation is the biggest liability for the mid-terms?"

The spirit murmured, "What a stupid son-of-a-b@#*".

Today, while standing in line at the checkout counter at Piggly Wiggly I read this in one of the magazines, "Having seen his work at the Oscars, the President is commissioning Will Smith to slap Putin to try and knock some sense into him." Once that mission is completed, Will Smith has a list of another potential "slappees," including Donald Trump, Clarence Thomas' wife, and everybody at the Fox News Channel.

According to the Click News, America will go through its first Civil War since 1865 between the vaccinated and the unvaccinated folks. The U.S. is preparing to put all unvaccinated people in a concentration camp through an executive order to avoid the looming Civil War. The executive order will not apply to the illegals coming through the Mexican border though. The guests in the camps will retain the right not to be vaccinated while being subjected to daily testing instead. They will also retain the right to remain unemployed.

According to Chatter Burger magazine, the Neanderthals are planning a massive protest at the nation's capital to protest their comparison with the January 6 insurrectionists. The spokesperson of the group said, "We're nothing at all like those morons. We learned our lesson quite early. We experienced extinction because we didn't wear masks, didn't maintain social distancing, and didn't get vaccinated. We won't repeat those mistakes again. I mean, we're Neanderthals, not idiots!"

Nearby, several dozen anti-mask demonstrators were injured with second and third-degree burns at a mask-burning rally. "This just goes to show how dangerous these masks really are," observed event organizer Boom Boom, "Of course next time we'll make sure everybody removes their mask before setting it on fire."

More real news after my next trip to Piggly Wiggly next week. Stay tuned.
